Financial Sector: Brink’s–NCR Atleos Deal Raises Questions About Who Controls ATM Retirement — UK/U.S. Outlook

Published: 16 October 2026 | Author: David Daoud

The proposed 6.6 billion dollar acquisition of NCR Atleos by Brink’s is advancing through a UK competition review, with the companies targeting completion in early 2027. The transaction would combine Brink’s cash management operations with NCR Atleos’s ATM technology and management business. For IT asset disposition (ITAD) providers, the development raises a commercial question: who controls the retirement of banking equipment as financial institutions increasingly rely on specialized operators to manage their ATM infrastructure?
